Industrial Automation Playbook

Discussion Guide for Manufacturers

Now that you have completed the Industrial Automation training module, it's important to connect with your supervisor/manager to confirm what products and services your company supports in this market and what role in the ecosystem your company participates in. Use this discussion guide to align your company's go-to-market strategy with your learning experience.

<ul> <li>Discreet</li> <li>Process</li> <li>Batch production</li> <li>Made to order</li> <li>Project</li> <li>Job shop</li> <li>Engineer to order</li> <li>Made to stock</li> </ul> Our solutions can be tailored to all the environments		Which end-user markets/segments do we participate in?
<ul> <li>Discreet</li> <li>Mass production</li> <li>Process</li> <li>Batch production</li> <li>Made to order</li> <li>Project</li> <li>Job shop</li> <li>Engineer to order</li> <li>Made to stock</li> </ul> Our solutions can be tailored to all the environments	•	What is our	value propositi	on to the	se end-user markets	? Wh	at core drivers do we
	3.	0	Discreet Process	0	Mass production Batch production	0	Assemble to order Made to order Engineer to order
1. Which industry players do we interact with?		o Our	solutions can b	e tailore	d to all the environme		Made to Stock
	4.	Which indus	stry players do	we intera	act with?
	5.	What is our	value propositi	on to the	se industry players?

Produ	cts:
6.	What types of products do we provide to the Industrial Automation market?
7	How are our products typically treated on a specification? Are they generally spec'd:
	alone / as equal / generic / or a combination? (circle which ones apply)
Sellin	g Through Distribution:
8.	What types of distributors do we sell our products through?      Full line     Automation     Process Control Distributor     Value Added Reseller
	<ul> <li>Online Distributor: Amazon, e-Bay, etc.</li> </ul>
9.	What best describes our distribution policy/strategy?  o Exclusive o Selective o Broad
10	. Are our products stocked by distributors or do we ship them directly to the customer site?
11	. Do we offer any training programs to support our distributors? If so, what training is provided'
	ext series of questions focus on the financial concepts and support programs you learned in Chapter three of the module:
12	. How do we help our distributors increase product demand?
13	. How do we help our distributors improve gross margins?

14.	What programs do we offer to help distributors with inventory turns?
15.	How do we help our distributors lower their operating costs?
st oth	er questions you have for your manager or team members: